“ I can still remember when I chose to play the viola and Mrs. McCray had me hold up my hand. I had her for 6th, 7th and 8th grade Orchestra. She pushed me so hard and always motivated me to be better. She was always passionate about us and always told us that we could be better. She spoke to us with so much love that you just wanted to make her proud. I was thinking about her and saw this news and it broke my heart. Her memory will always live on.

“ I just stumbled across this. I am saddened. It seems that I talk about Ms. McCray once or so a year. She was my Orchestra teacher in 1977. On the first day of class when we were asked to choose an instrument. I chose the bass. She said no. I said yes. She said no. I said YES. She replied by stating that she never had a 6th grader able to play it. In my arrogance I replied, I will be your first. She thought I was cocky. She asked me to hold up my left hand and open it as wide as possible. She looked at it and said, you will be my first. She took a chance on an arrogant, cocky, and stubborn 11 year old. I was determined to make her proud.

I know that she had my respect and I find it warming that other students that she taught felt the same about her that I do. She was a wonderful, patient and incredible woman. It was a bonus that she was also a teacher.

“ We are fortunate to have had you in our lives. We will miss you so much, but will treasure every memory from the forty-plus years we have been neighbors. You have served as a role model, a mentor, an advocate and a trailblazer for the black community. But for us, you are forever “Ms. Sue.” We love you

“ My condolences to the family of Mrs. Susan B. McCray. Mrs. McCray was certainly a beautiful soul. As a mother of nine children, Mrs. McCray was the orchestra director for my children. She was the orchestra director for older my brother as well! Many days, we hung out at her home. At the time, we lived in Holiday Lakes. I was saddened when she retired, but I am glad she received an opportunity to enjoy life. We love and will definitely miss Mrs. McCray. 🙏❤️

“ Oh wow! This one hurts! Mrs. McCray you were the epitome of class, beauty, love and kindness! You were the original “classy auntie.” The love you had and showed your students was invaluable! You made musical instruments cool in the hood! You will be deeply missed!

“ Ms. McCray,
We are so sad to learn she has passed. She was the most caring & giving teacher.
She helped both of us when we lost our little brother Richard Hogg .
She did comfort my mom & us children . I never forgot her kindness thru that terrible time. She cried for Richard as he was a student of hers
Ms. McCray you are so beloved & will be so missed.
You changed alot of students lives for the better.
I will never forget you. May god always hold you close.
God bless you.oxo
